APU has a system whereby fixed-term faculty members appointed on a tenure-track system undergo an internal screening during the latter half of their third year following appointment. This screening involves a review of the faculty member's educational, research and university administrative achievements. In cases where the faculty member meets the screening criteria as set by the University's regulations, the faculty member will have his/her status changed from fixed-term to tenured, which includes employment through to the age of mandatory retirement. APU assesses faculty members on their research achievements, primarily through the evaluation of peer refereed journal articles.

If a faculty member is not approved for tenure during his/her third year, he/she are eligible to undergo a re-screening during his/her fourth year.

The age of mandatory retirement is 65 years for Professors and 60 years for Associate Professors.
